

Marie Kirincic, M.D.

Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation

Staff Physician, Hinsdale Orthopaedics

Dr. Kirincic is sought out by patients to help manage acute, chronic and post-operative chronic pain conditions. She aims to avoid surgery when approaching patient care for musculoskeletal disorders by focusing on alternative methods including trigger points and joint injections, interventional fluoroscopic guided procedures, opioid and non-opioid pharmacotherapy and electrodiagnostics “EMG” nerve testing.

Dr. Kirincic joined Hinsdale Orthopaedics in 2003. She is board certified in Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation (PM&R), as well as Pain Medicine. Dr. Kirincic’s postgraduate studies included a residency at Loyola University in Chicago, Illinois followed by an additional year of fellowship training in Chronic Pain Management at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago.

Dr. Kirincic is an active member of many professional societies in order to better care for the patients and families of Hinsdale Orthopaedics. She is an educator for medical students and residents and previously served as a Clinical Instructor at Northwestern University in Chicago.
